

Coronavirus Could Spur Desktop-as-a-Service Adoption

Some organizations - like a city in California and a university in Australia - have turned to desktop as a service in the face of disruptions like the coronavirus.

As the Coronavirus spreads, the possibility for a major disruption of an organization's day-to-day activities grows. See how digital workspace solutions can help drive business continuity in challenging times.

To read the article, please TechTarget