

COVID-19 Teaches Higher Education Institutes to Embrace Latest IT to Advance Remote Learning

A discussion on how colleges and universities must rapidly redefine and implement a new and dynamic and blended balance between in-person and remote learning interactions.

Innovators in higher education have been transforming themselves for the digital age for years, but the COVID-19 pandemic nearly overnight accelerated the need for flexible new learning models. See how two leading institutions are leveraging digital workspace solutions to adapt.

To read the article, please visit Briefings Direct.