

Knowledge workers start to reject charms of big city

Dispersing good jobs into a wider range of locations could — as well as improving life for those who have previously been drawn to big cities — help narrow the divide and breathe new life into areas that have been in decline for decades.

To read this article, please visit Forbes.