

How State and Local Agencies Are Embracing Remote Installations

In the face of COVID-19, governments have moved ahead with IT projects — securing help along the way.

Having already spent a few years moving key server infrastructure and services to the cloud, the city of Corona, Calif., had begun exploring putting its desktops there too when the coronavirus sent many of its workers home. Click here to see how Citrix helped get them up and running quickly and is keeping them engaged and productive.

To read the article, please visit StateTech Magazine.