

90% of Millennials, Gen-Z do not want to return to full-time office work post-pandemic: report

A Citrix study found that corporations expect people born after 1981 to deliver an extra $1.9 trillion in profits.

A new report from Citrix Systems found that people born after 1981 – called the "Born Digital" generation – are no longer interested in working full time in offices and are vastly more tech savvy than any generation before them.

To read the article, please visit ZDNet.