

What Employees Really Want in 2021

New research shows flexibility, agility and diversity will be key to attracting and retaining talent

Few employees are interested in adding to the upheaval the global pandemic has created in their lives by changing jobs. But when it eventually subsides, many will be open to exploring their options. A new study from Citrix reveals what they will be looking for.

To read the article, please visit Medium.