

If more people could work remotely,
the U.S. economy could gain trillions

In addition to enhancing productivity and employee engagement, research shows allowing flexible work models have the potential to boost the US economy by $2.36 trillion annually.

To read this article, please visit TechHR Series